RELIGIOUS TRENDS IS TIMELY SUBJECT OF MISS CARTER

Interest in the life of Jesus is also increasing and Christianity has not begun to exhaust the wealth of it. We need not despair for humanity if it can produce such a man, she said.

Finally, all human experience is seen as relative and such expressions as "infallible church" and "absolute truth" are not used as often as before. The Bible is viewed as the record of an unusually gifted people, as "a light to our feet and a guide to our path." Religion is also turning to inner authority rather than a superimposed one.

In conclusion, Miss Carter mentioned two ways in which religion may serve in the present crisis. It may, first of all, be an inner reserve of energy, strength and courage, and secondly, it can keep alive the value of life for a world that is materially and spiritually bankrupt.

The Boston Sextette Appears at Hollins

The Boston Colonial Sextette made its first appearance on Hollins campus Monday evening, January 16th, in the Little Theatre.

In the opinion of some this critic the College has enjoyed better concerts, although the singers offered an evening's pleasant relaxation.

Mr. Carmody, the basso, showed real musical feeling, and his solo, "Old Mass River," met with the vigorous approval of the audience. Although slightly below the standard of true artistic performances, this program was both creditable and enjoyable.
