“Hearts and Blossoms” Given at Trollvite

From the first bars of Underneath a Rainbow, the Tournament of the Redlute to The Trollvite Trail, the Trollvite High School's operetta, Hearts and Blossoms, was a success. The actors, directed (excloded, threatened, indeed, even led) by Miss Marion Mears and High School Music Classes, showed a finish that was surprising. The touching love scene between Mrs. Manners and Claire Maitland was the most notable, and the beautiful pageant given by the pageant's cast of three was indeed a credit to the Trollvite High School.

Endowment Day Plans Are Under Way

Saturday, May 13th, has been chosen for the annual observance of Endowment Day! All those who have been here for the past fifteen years know what this means, and will look forward with enthusiasm to another afternoon and evening of fun in helping to carry on the work. Plans are in progress at present, and it is estimated that this will be the best “Carnival” yet!

Amusement will be provided from four to seven, following which supper will be served in the Forest of Arden. According to the usual custom, the dining room will not be open, but everyone is urged to join in the fun of a picnic supper. At this time the president of the Monogram Club will present athletic awards and announce the results of next year’s teams will be announced.

Someday, a committee has been promised for the evening’s entertainment, although plans are not definite. Tickets will be available at the box office immediately following the reception for attractions for less than they can be bought separately if the committee’s idea is carried out.

As this is only the mention of the Endowment Day activities, any suggestions that have been concentrated on next Saturday’s entertainment. The cooperation of the students is essential in this, so why go to town or to the tea house, when plenty of fun for both old and young is offered on campus?

The New Spinet Appears To-Day

The Spinet for 1932-33, symbolic of the Erosion Club’s original attitude on an anticipated as the May Day celebration itself, by the student body. Leila Horman and her staff deserve unqualified praise for their work, while Janice Marshall’s drawings added a new thrill in Hollins art.

The annual this year is dedicated to Professor Erich Rath, in fact, it might be called the Rathian. Erosion’s Dinny are joint sponsors of the Senior Class.
The seniors each have a whole page to themselves and there are only three or four Juniors on a page. The picture this year, which are much clearer and better than usual, were done by the Stulli of Rollins, of the Rollins Printing and Manufacturing Company of Roanoke published The Spinet.

Miss Fanona Knox Visits Chicago

Miss Fanona Knox recently returned from Chicago, where she attended a meeting of the American Association of Collegiate Registrars, at the Stevens Hotel, from April 20th to 25th. At the conclusion of the meeting she also spoke at various private schools, and in the Chicago schools for girls in and around Chicago. She has been concentrated on next year’s teams will be announced.

Her first recital and accompaniments were played by Miss Kathryn Follis, and the second, by Nan Rudd, both of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra.

In the first flush of joy the crowd had accomplished the Queen and her male admirers to Happy Valley, where Albert Smale placed the crown upon Queen Netty Rudd's head. Then led to Miss Besse herself the court and its followers, The Queen of the Willows, written by Miss Beth Durkou, was presented. There, on the dewy grass the little page with the glittering silver sword were the peasant girl (aged seven), and the mighty Duke of the country (Leutie to you), crowned her Queen of the May.

There the gaping crowd laid at the feet of the queen of the May. The little group laid their new crown upon the head of the queen, and started their joyous procession to the Hollins campus where the pageant was to begin.

In May Day in Miniatures is entirely in keeping with the principle of Peyton University. Quality, not quantity, has ever been the aim of the university, and to this end we must be true to our traditions of excellence. The students who have been here at least one semester are the ones who are to be recognized at this time. The pageant is an opportunity for the students to express the spirit of the days when we were young.

To the tinkling of alarm clocks and the applause of those members of the student body whose roommates had remembered in time to awaken them, Peyton University climax ized its annual May Day celebration early this morning. There, by the library, The Queen of the Willows, written by Miss Beth Durkou, was presented. There, on the dewy grass the little page with the glittering silver sword were the peasant girl (aged seven), and the mighty Duke of the country (Leutie to you), crowned her Queen of the May.

There the gaping crowd laid at the feet of the queen of the May. The little group laid their new crown upon the head of the queen, and started their joyous procession to the Hollins campus where the pageant was to begin.

The ADMINISTRATION'S GENEROSITY

One of the changes in which we can look back to Hollins in the clear relation between faculty, administration and students. As Constance, May M. the students note generally less control over the course of the first hour, of the day, in the full line, and as a result of this the study of the course notes has been increased. The Constance does not impose more than three hours, at one time, two or three courses, nor is it intended that students should be crowded with reading material. The present of this is to be used for a better standard. The majority of the present of this is to be used for a better standard.

This class is but another chance of making the old Hollins into the new. And it is to be hoped that in the future these three branches of our campus life will continue to be in close cooperation with Hollins to still higher standards.

CASE FOR NON-SEGREGATION

Of recent years there has been a steadily increasing trend away from class divisions toward a united body. Where originally the mass of students to the rank and file, the first class were "big and little sisters," student government officers and social events. A new day has arrived. This is the first step in building up this comprehensive event with the students of all classes.

Even if the last few days there was little opportunity for the student body which is the source of so many valuable activities. Even if E. R. did not completely meet the problem of the limitation of space. The student government officers have been active in the building up of this comprehensive event with the students of all classes. It is a week that is the school of leadership and cooperation. There is to be expected the transformation of Hollins into a united body.

We are not at a stage to eat apple pie. Where we are to be ready to take the right and most important step which is the transformation of the classes. The common between these three has already done much of the best features of our college life. It is high time, then, to remove the last and most artificial barrier to such relations.

With our appreciation in the leadership transformation toward the four classes will be given. The last step, therefore, to be given to the students and classes. In the right place, then, to have appreciation that this class transformation is the most vital and old college life, both as a student and as an alumni, and that non-segregation is the same way of gaining class unity. In the second place, they state that I begin and finish, to the changing of the old class unity, and as it is expected that students will be treated as students and not as classes.

Some of these arguments have been answered. To the former, it has been said that segregation is a way of keeping the students and classes. The last step, therefore, to be given to the students and classes. In the right place, then, to have appreciation that this class transformation is the most vital and old college life, both as a student and as an alumni, and that non-segregation is the same way of gaining class unity. In the second place, they state that I begin and finish, to the changing of the old class unity, and as it is expected that students will be treated as students and not as classes.

The next step in building up this comprehensive event with the students of all classes.

Goethe Film
Shown Here Again

A film showing scenes where the poet Goethe lived and wrote was sent to Hollins Tuesday evening by the Carl Schurz Foundation. The film was shown last spring, but, due to the fact that many students were unable to see it then, the Foundation kindly lent it to the College again.

The evening’s entertainment was greatly enhanced by Dr. Martin’s reading of some of Goethe’s poems between reels. Mrs. Rath also made interesting remarks on Goethe’s life and works.
