Evans Win Fall Archery Tournament

With Margaret Richardson and Frances Wells as high point scorers, the Evans defeated the Odds in the fall archery tournament last week. The competition was based on the Columbia round of twenty-four arrows shot at twenty-five yards.

History of Hockey at Hollins

The Virginia Blue Ridge Section of the American Chemical Society will hold its annual Odd-Even Band at Hollins College on Thursday, December 16th. The evening will be in the Little Theatre, at 8:15 P. M. Dr. Elmer V. McCollom, who has been Professor of Biochemistry in the School of Hygiene and Public Health at Johns Hopkins University since 1917, will deliver the address of the evening on "Where We Stand in Our Knowledge of Nutrition." McCollom has international fame in the field of nutrition. He was one of the three independent groups of workers who first published experimental evidence for the existence of vitamins in 1912. He has been a pioneer, then, and also a tireless worker in the effort to push our knowledge of the vitamins further and further. Thus, together with his work on deficiency diseases and faulty diets, has brought him many honors: The Howard N. Potts Medal from the Franklin Institute in 1921, the Isaac Ridgeway Triibble Medal for standard on bone growth in 1923, the John Scott Medal from the City of Philadelphia in 1924, and the Newell Jillings Medal from the Connecticut State Dental Society in 1927.

Roanoke Symphony Gives First Concert

ROANOKE SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA OPENED SERIES ON NOV. 19th

Playing to a large audience, the Roanoke Civic Symphony Orchestra, under the baton of Miss Hazel Burnham, opened its series of concerts Saturday, November 19th, in the American Theater. The program began with the Haydn Clock Symphony (Number Four), of which the first movement was particularly beautiful. The staging was particularly effective in the Italian dance scenes and was heightened by artistic lighting effects.

The cast was as follows:

Miss Farnsworth Discusses "Matter" Conversation

"Matter," for the sake of Mr. H. Austin and Miss Alice F. Proctor, is a little theme that does not concern us with the nature of matter, and after this discussion, they may discuss any subject that they wish to, such as, music, politics, society, and other important matters.

Miss Farnsworth actually began by talking about the nature of matter, and then she went on to talk about the separation and combination of elements. She said that some elements were generally regarded as being more basic than others, and that this could not be proven scientifically. She also said that some elements were more complex than others, and that this could not be proven scientifically. She then went on to talk about the atomic structure of matter, and how the electrons revolve around the nucleus. She said that this structure is the key to understanding the behavior of matter.

The discussion was very interesting, and it was quite evident that Miss Farnsworth was well versed in the subject. She was able to answer most of the questions that were asked, and she was able to explain the concepts in a clear and concise manner.

Overall, this was a very informative and enlightening discussion. It was a good way to start the year, and I am looking forward to more discussions in the future.

Y. W. Cabinet and Advisory Board Meet; Formulate Plans
On Monday night, November 20th, a joint meeting of the Y. W. Cabinet and its Advisory Board was held. The discussion mainly centered around the decision to hold a dance in December, Monday evening, November seventeenth. Miss Siler, as Chairman of the Board, presided, while other members present were Miss Charley, Mrs. Rath, Miss Maddrey and Mr. Thomas, who has lately been selected as an advisor for Y. W. Varnell. It was decided that the Cabinet would be responsible for asking Miss Siler if this was the best time for the dance, and certain powers conferred on him, just as Congress has invested rights in Mr. Roosevelt.

Caw Rotspeiser took up a few more of the criticisms against Germany and endeavored to explain them from the viewpoint of her country. She said that whereas in most countries, the press was controlled by private interests which were in a position to dictate policies, the German press is in the hands of the government whose duty it is to look out for the public good.

Germany also does not wish to be "exported" her National Socialism but she says her only aim is to make "a unified and solid nation." Since the Jews represent one of the worst elements of the total population, the discussion is comparatively unimportant and a small item in the whole movement from the German point of view.

Considering the shortness of the term of the National-Socialist regime, as Miss Rotspeiser says it can not yet be judged by the achievements of her country.

After this talk questions were asked and discussion held on various economic, social and political aspects of present Germany.

Hertha Rotspeiser, in a most vital discussion arose as a result of a letter received by Miss Siler in regard to the pending trial of Mrs. Sam C. White in Pennsylvania. The question is one of race since the accused is a negro.

Various organizations are attempting to arouse public opinion to such a degree that this man will be assured of a fair trial and will be punished.

Margaret Smith reported that Y. W. has been fortunate enough to secure Dr. Gordon Gilkey, of Springfield, Massa­chusetts, to give a series of addresses in March 1st and 2d. He is the brother of the late Charles Gilkey, of the University of Chicago, whom the Seniors remember hearing their Freshman year and who is to return next year as Professor.

Dr. Archibald Black, of Montclair, New Jersey, is also scheduled to speak next year.

Mr. W. P. Brown, President of the Dramatic Association, was presented to the student body Wednesday evening, November 15th, by Elynna Greer, President of the Dramatic Board. The members of the board gave a short melodrama illustrating the various processes connected with the final production of a play. The melo­drama, termed with merriment, was the sad history of the end of one, Arabel, who died from poison at her husband's hand while the heartlessly brute lookt on. It was entitled "The Dying Wife" and the parts were taken by Chas. Hilly and Florence Shelley.

Before raising the curtain for this production, Miss Greer spoke briefly on the aims and purposes of the Dramatic Association and urged each student to try out for some part in a play or to sign up for participation in back stage work.

As every student is automatically a member of the organization, the only require­ments for taking part in a production are certain academic grades.

Miss Greer also announced the plays to be presented this year. The first, which will be presented is "Barrie's "Quality Street'' for the Spring Play and Alfred Noyes "Shenandoah" for the Commencement Play, which will be given out of doors. Y. M. Ye. Merrie Maquers, however, a dramatic association, has presented a Christmas Pageant in the Little Theatre on Sunday evening, December 17th, immediately following the White Gift Service in the Chapel.
