Bairnsfather Presents Lecture in Roanoke

NARRATES ADVENTURES OF "OLE BILL"

Captain Bruce Bairnsfather, creator of "Ole Bill," of world war fame, captured the hearts and imaginations of a large crowd of Roanokers Monday night with his whimsical drawings and fascinating stories.

In his opening speech, Mr. Bairnsfather noted that "Ole Bill," as he is called, is a private comedian who has made the people of Roanoke, Virginia, feel better about the war. He said that the people of Roanoke are not only interested in the war, but they are also interested in their neighbors and their own lives.

Mr. Bairnsfather then proceeded to tell the story of "Ole Bill," who is a Klondike miner who went to the war in 1918. He told how "Ole Bill" got drafed, and how he escaped from the draft because of his age. Mr. Bairnsfather also told how "Ole Bill" came to Roanoke, and how he became a well-known figure in the city.

The lecture was concluded with a drawing of "Ole Bill" standing in front of a crowd of people, and the audience was left with a feeling of hope and optimism.

First Issue of "Cargoes" Shows Literary Ability

One feels like the boy on the horse, with his pos in hand, pictured on the cover of "Cargoes," yet, while he is merely drawing on the outside, one opens the cover, and scans the pages of this first copy.

With the arrival of each issue of "Cargoes," there is new talent cropping, or perhaps leaping, forth, to take its position in the field of literature. For some unknown reason, girls rarely realize early in the term, that they are capable of writing for the magazine. But when they do realize this, they are able to contribute to the editor, and to the magazine, their own particular style of writing.

Mr. Lane, the editor, would like to see more of these young writers contribute to the magazine. He believes that the magazine can be improved by the addition of more young talent.

The magazine is published weekly, and the next issue will be out in about a week.

New Bulletin Board System to Go Into Effect Soon

The bulletin board system will be changed soon, according to the new bulletin board policy, which will take effect on Monday.

The new policy will include a change in the design of the bulletin board, as well as changes in the procedures for posting announcements. The new system will be more user-friendly and easier to use.

The bulletin board system is used by the college to communicate important information to students, faculty, and staff. The new system will be designed to make it easier for people to find the information they need.

The new bulletin board system will be implemented in the next few weeks, and all students, faculty, and staff will be notified of the changes.

New Club Presented Mr. Lane

The new club being presented to Mr. Lane is the "Student Life" club. The club will be presented to Mr. Lane on Monday evening, and he will be given a tour of the new club.

The club is being formed to provide a place for students to socialize and have fun. It will be located in the new building, and will be open to all students.

The club will be open to all students, and will be run by the students. The club will have a budget, and will be responsible for its own finances.

The club will be open to all students, and will be run by the students.
Hollins Student Life

PROVINCIALITY

Hollins is too provincial. That is the criticism of alumni, faculty, and many thinking students. It is the subject of frequent discussion in the dorms and at various student functions on campus. Any criticism so widespread and emphatic is not without justification and is in a sense the cause of the change in the college which is the cause of the criticism.

It may be held, as on hard, that this era of play before we get into serious work is the fault of the faculty. It is the faculty who are responsible for the way students are taught and for the quality of the education they are given. If we are to blame, we are not the only ones. The faculty is a body of people who have to be content with the work they are given and must work to the best of their ability to produce the best results possible.

The only criticism I can think of at the moment is that we do not have enough variety in our curriculum. We should be offered more courses in the arts and sciences, and we should be encouraged to pursue our own interests. Hollins has a history of being a women's college, and I think that this has helped to shape our focus. However, we should not be afraid to try new things and to explore a variety of different fields.

Elizabeth is one of the younger members of the family and is a very well-spoken young lady. She was seated at the head of the table and was very happy to have the opportunity to spend time with her family.

At Hollins, the family reunion is an annual event that brings together the Winslows and the other members of the community. This year, the reunion was held in the Winslow's home, and Elizabeth was very happy to be able to spend time with her family.

Future Duses Discovered in First Fall Play

"The Ivory Door" disclosed some hitherto unknown personages in its recent presentation. Mr. and Mrs. Murphy, and the same idea might well be applied here to say that "royally well," he must have been a delight to the audience. Hats off to King Perivale (Livingston). Incidentially, the Munmer left an impression that couldn't be over- shadowed even by the King. Young Prince Perivale had that certain something, too. We rose to the heights with Court Rolls but we won't forget Cherry in her role as exclusively Court Rolls forget the presentation address. The story of Princess Lila was presented with a flourish worthy of her Highness, who later appeared in the manner of one born to the nobility. The chaste, chaste, chaste and Old Anna played well their roles as servants of the king. King Friday and young Prince Perivale nobly opened and closed the play, showing the regality of the very old and the very young.

A word should be said about some of the other writers, though not included among the royalties, did nobly what they had to do. The soldiers performed their duties without any sort of complaint, even when they inherited a little too freely with sufficient provocation. The mob despite its relatively minor part in the development of the main plot, added its bit to the whole as it obediently became swayed by any suggestion that came along. There were several potential mob leaders included in the crowd, and Old Beppo with the combination of tricky makeup and Crichton's natural talent. Old Beppo was quite an outstanding character. The Jester presenting each act, provided the audience with an anticipation of what was to come. The "Ivory Door" was exceptionally good for a fall play.

Although Captain Bairnsfather served admirably in the war, one feels that he is an ardent and valuable pacifist. Just as he helped keep up the war spirit with his cartoons and humor during the war, so he may now do a large part to keep the world at peace. More powerful and influential than the greatest of Europe's statements, Captain Bairnsfather's skillful pen and keen wit are a great part of the world's hope for peace and friendship among the nations.
