Jeanette Rankin Speaks on Convocation on Peace

Well Known as Peace and Social Service Worker

SECOND LECTURE HERE

Miss Jeanette Rankin, Executive Secretary of the National Council for the Prevention of War, and one of the leading peace-war authorities in the United States, will speak in Convocation tonight in the Little Theater.

In view of her past experience, Miss Rankin, who was the first woman representative to the United States Congress, is particularly able to discuss this subject. Aside from her social work, and her activity as Congresswoman for Montana, Miss Rankin is well known for her leadership in behalf of world suffrage, having introduced the bill which later became the Sheppard-Towner Law. Following her two years in Congress, she became Secretary of the National American Woman's Suffrage Association. In her capacity as Executive Secretary of the Council for the Prevention of War, she directs the legislative activities of the organization. Miss Rankin is a member of the Georgia State Peace Conference and is altraversing the United States to fill speaking engagements on the addresses audiences at Roanoke College, Radford State Teachers College, University of Maryland and Harvard University. She will be her second trip to Hollins, her first having been made in the spring of 1934. Miss Rankin recently attended the evening at the Hotel Roanoke, the American Association of University Women entertained Miss Rankin as guest speaker. She chose as her subject Peace. The Standard of Civilization. Through the efforts of the Roanoke branch of the A. A. U. W., she has been secured as the speaker for this evening.

New Exhibitions Placed in Presser and Keller

The Art Exhibition in Presser this month will consist entirely of reproductions of paintings by Vincent Van Gogh. The paintings are from the collection of an eccentric artist who has a wider appeal than the majority of modern painters. For example, in discussing the exhibition of his work in New York last year, an all-time record for museum attendance in this country was reached. In spite of the fact that Van Gogh sold only four paintings during his life, reproductions of his work are now more popular than those of any other modern painter. Although the individual pictures have not yet been arranged in the exhibition, this exhibition promises to be one of the most interesting we have had on campus this year. There will be a brief gallery talk on the paintings after dinner on Sunday, December 6.

In addition to the Presser show, black and white wash drawings by Lois Lenski, who is well known in Adelaide Smith and one by Louie Brown Michaels. Nancy Phlegar Smith is in Richmond December 3 and 4 at the meeting of the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools. Such contacts with the arts, as with the arts, should be very helpful to all who attend the meetings.

Cargoes Staff Presents Session's First Issue

This year's first issue of Cargoes has been edited and will come out sometime this week. By incorporating some of their own ideas with those taken from the thoughtfully studying the magazines of other colleges, the editors of Cargoes, and our staff have changed somewhat the organization of the magazine. The more noticeable change is in the cover, which will have the Hollins seal and under that the index of the articles. Other changes have been made, too, in the listing of the staff and the editorial page. The chief article in this first issue, "Roosevelt and the Navy," by Mary Stutle Jefferson, is a clear analysis of the President's naval policy which, the author states, has been furthered by his acute interest in modern youth and its attitude toward religion. Sunday evening club, the old members Mrs. McGinnis, and Dr. and Mrs. Henry will attend at American University in Washington on November 21, consisted primarily of addresses by well known speakers and discussion groups. The two most outstanding addresses were made by Dean Irma Voight, of Ohio University, President of the National Association of Deans of Women, on "New Frontiers for Youth," and Charles W. C. Gray, of American University, on the subject of "Those German Women," and the associates in discussion. The discussion groups were conducted by Miss Dorothy Stimson, Dean of Women, and Miss Dorothy Stimson, Dean of Students.

Miss Rachel Wilson attended the Roanoke branch of the Virginia Educational Society meetings in Richmond, November 25 and 26. The principal speaker at the meeting was Dean Irma Voight, Assistant Director of Modern Languages in New York City, both discussed the changing role of the foreign language teacher today. Also attending the meetings in Richmond was Miss Chaveroux, who was an exchange teacher in this country.

In addition to the Presser show, black and white wash drawings by Lois Lenski, Miss Williams and Miss Mary Phlegar Smith will be in Richmond December 3 and 4 at the meeting of the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools. Such contacts with the arts, as with the arts, should be very helpful to all who attend the meetings.

Climax of Hockey Season Leaves Many Memories

The hockey game has been written up in the press extensively this season, and the bouquet has been reported with an eye to the day when the colonels made and the announcement of the honorary Varsity Hockey Team; it is now time to record some of theColonial girls who have been outstanding in their respective fields. Miss Chevreaux is still the head of the Varsity Hockey Team, and her influence has been felt in every game. She is able to make the boys suffer in their pain, and they seem to be able to take it in stride. Because of Miss Chevreaux's influence, the team is able to win more games.

The Odd Team was, by a narrow margin, the victor in the annual Odd-Even hockey game played Wednesday, November 25, here at Hollins. From the starting whistle it was a fast game, and an exhibition of good hockey, not at all on the one-sided affair the scores of the last year seemed to indicate. The play, though more violent than usual around the center, where four of the best players were concentrated, was wide open. Shots were clear and hard; passes were planned before the ball was in play, and the defense either slipped in by tricky stick work or rushed past the guards with swift, hard. In the final analysis it was exactly the best game of the season from a viewpoint both of the Colonials and the Odd-Even game is past. Hollins is again a united whole.
